SUMMARY

Susan is the Lead Advising Coordinator in the College of Science. For over thirteen years, Susan has translated department- and college-level responsibilities into significant improvements in the areas of curriculum and advising that have been implemented campus-wide. During that time, Susan has set the tone and standard for the entire college to work diligently on the behalf of students and treat each one with the utmost respect, integrity, and compassion.

Susan serves a college that houses over 3500 undergraduate majors and delivers 100,000 student credit hours per semester to the university, including most of the area 4 and 5 courses in the Curriculum for Liberal Education. She works closely with Admissions, the Registrar, the Dean of Students and Financial Aid, and currently serves on eight university committees and the Virginia Tech Presidential Task Force to develop the next University Strategic Plan. Last year, Susan and Todd Ogle collaborated to make the curriculum review process electronic. This system will greatly reduce the lag time it takes from the inception of a course or degree proposal to its completion and acceptance into the course catalog. All of Susan's efforts work toward her goal of providing better service to our students.
