SUMMARY

As a senior accountant, Stuart D. Woods is an asset to the Controller's Office as well as many other departments across campus.

He is always helpful and supportive of those he works with from other departments, and mindful of pressures and workload they bear. He continually searches for process improvements to make their jobs easier.

The feedback received about Woods has always been very positive. He goes above and beyond what is expected of him in his job duties, and takes on additional responsibilities; such as supporting the office IT staff and serving as a backup when they are out of the office. He also serves as the office's first green representative, promoting recycling and sustainable practices.

Woods is always willing to help others with any issues that may arise, from desktop problems to application questions. He has developed his technical skills over his eight years at Virginia Tech, and enjoys teaching and helping others to also become more proficient in their job duties.
